

ABSTRACT

Image data by which an image is represented with a plurality of pixels are acquired, a portion being image data characterizing an artificial image is extracted from the image represented by the acquired image data, and prescribed image processing is performed by excluding the image data of the portion extracted from said acquired image data in the artificial-image extracting procedure. Accordingly, the image processing can be performed without being affected by the artificial image.